

Wisconsin Governor Candidate Jamie Jo Carothers Discusses Priorities on “Get to Know”

By David Murchland - Marshfield Now!

Education and Workforce

MARSHFIELD — Improving Wisconsin residents’ quality of life, reviewing state spending and strengthening communication between state and local governments were central themes of Jamie Jo Carothers’ appearance on Marshfield Broadcasting’s candidate interview program, Get to Know.

Carothers described herself as an independent, moderate write-in candidate for Wisconsin governor. She said her campaign focuses on finding common ground and evaluating government programs based on their results.

Carothers identified three primary priorities: improving residents’ standard of living, managing the state budget carefully and supporting initiatives that promote well-being.

“We need to make dollars work for us both in our households and in our tax dollars,” she said.

Throughout the conversation, Carothers pointed to financial pressures affecting families, individuals and local governments. She said her approach to taxes and spending would involve examining tax structures and directing resources toward programs that demonstrate the strongest potential to help residents.

She also emphasized ongoing review, saying an administration should be willing to reconsider programs that fail to deliver results, including its own initiatives.

Carothers proposed examining whether some social-service spending currently included in education budgets could be shifted to county social services. She said a pilot approach could help determine whether that change would improve tracking and provide a more operating within the state. Her goal, she said, would be to encourage more graduates to remain in Wisconsin.

Addressing workforce shortages, Carothers said the state should attract employers that offer desirable workplaces while promoting Wisconsin’s communities and quality of even distribution of services.

She also called for greater accountability in education spending and clearer distinctions between educational expenses and other services.

“Our kids are worth spending on,” she said.

Within schools, Carothers said she would like to see a stronger focus on arts, literature and other activities that support student well-being. She described those opportunities as ways to help students manage stress.

On higher education, she said Wisconsin universities and technical colleges should connect their programs to the needs and strengths of industries life to workers and young families.

A Voice for Smaller Communities

Carothers said rural communities and smaller cities should have an equal place in conversations about Wisconsin’s future.

She described state and local governments as partners and emphasized clear communication, shared ideas and regular assessments of whether funding supports effective programs.

Asked whether communities should have more control over local revenue and decisions, she expressed support while emphasizing coordination with the governor and Legislature.

For agriculture, Carothers suggested considering a budgeted emergency fund and cooperation among states to help respond to challenges facing farmers.

Compromise and Personal Background

Carothers said her independent candidacy reflects a preference for moderate solutions and compromise across political differences.

She identified marijuana legalization as an issue on which she would not compromise, expressing opposition to recreational legalization while supporting assessments for people seeking marijuana for medicinal purposes.

The interview also explored her personal and professional background. Carothers said she has worked in finance and lending and served as a regional team leader in Wisconsin for the 2020 census.

She described the loss of her father in 2018 as an experience that shaped how she thinks about people facing difficult circumstances. She also credited her grandmother with encouraging her interest in politics.

Outside campaigning, Carothers said she enjoys northern Wisconsin's lakes and forests, hiking, cooking, baking and knitting.

Asked how she would want to be remembered as governor, she said: "One who cared, one who made a difference for everyone in the state."

Marshfield Council to Begin Budget Review, Consider Housing Redevelopment and Camping Ordinance

MARSHFIELD — The Marshfield Common Council will begin its fall budget review Tuesday, Oct. 13, with an evening that also includes discussion of affordable housing, firefighter equipment, traffic signals and a proposed ordinance restricting camping outside designated areas.

During Marshfield Broadcasting's Council Preview, City Administrator Steve Barg joined host David Murchland to discuss the upcoming agenda. Barg said the first budget meeting will begin at 5 p.m., followed by the regular council meeting at 7 p.m.

The budget session will introduce the city's revenue and expense outlook, highlight major issues and outline decisions council members will face during the four-meeting review process.

Residents will have an opportunity to speak during public comment, with up to five minutes at the podium. Barg encouraged people to share their priorities and concerns, even if they do not have a detailed financial solution.

Council members also will consider changes to the budget calendar. The proposed revisions would move the third budget meeting from Oct. 26 to Tuesday, Oct. 27, at 5 p.m., and the fourth meeting from Oct. 28 to Thursday, Oct. 29, at 6 p.m.

Barg said the final session would allow council members to address remaining adjustments before moving toward the public hearing and budget adoption later in the fall.

A proposed redevelopment of the former Weinbrenner building at 305 W. Third St. is another item on the regular meeting agenda. Barg said the project could create up to 83 affordable apartments, depending on its feasibility.

The council will consider a memorandum of understanding with Milwaukee-based Jeffers & Co. that would help the developer move forward with applications for historic and low-income housing tax credits.

According to Barg, the proposed agreement would commit the city to contributing up to $100,000 toward predevelopment expenses, while the developer would cover the larger share. A final development agreement would require additional work, and a potential transfer of the building for $1 remains part of the anticipated arrangement.

Barg said a preapplication is due Nov. 2, followed by a final application in February 2027. Missing that cycle could delay the project another year.

The council also is scheduled to take up the second reading of an ordinance prohibiting camping outside designated areas. Barg said the discussion grew partly from questions about someone living in a vehicle on a city street and broader concerns about extended stays on public property.

The proposal was first discussed Sept. 22. The revised draft includes a one-year sunset provision, meaning the ordinance would end unless the council takes action to renew it.

Barg said additional changes could be made before the meeting. He also acknowledged the importance of helping people find suitable housing while addressing concerns about people living on city property.

For the fire department, council members will consider authorizing an Assistance to Firefighters Grant application to replace aging self-contained breathing apparatus.

Barg said the equipment is approaching the end of its approximately 15-year lifespan, with replacement costs potentially reaching roughly $500,000. He said a successful grant application could cover 95 percent of the cost, leaving the city responsible for 5 percent.

The grant is competitive, and funding is not guaranteed. Barg said the Finance, Budget and Personnel Committee has supported pursuing the application.

Traffic signal timing also will be discussed as the city considers seeking proposals for traffic modeling and analysis. Barg said the work could help improve coordination among signals on streets including Central Avenue, Veterans Parkway, Oak Avenue and Peach Avenue.

The analysis could identify timing adjustments and locations where changes to left-turn signals would improve traffic flow.

Another proposed resolution would advance planning for a power generation project involving Marshfield Utilities and Great Lakes Utilities. Barg said the proposed ownership structure would give Great Lakes Utilities a 70 percent share and the city, through Marshfield Utilities, a 30 percent share.

A site in the newer portion of the industrial park is under consideration. Barg described the resolution as a planning checkpoint that would authorize continued negotiations, with additional city approvals still needed. He said the facility might be completed in 2029 or 2030.

Council members also will revisit the city's public comment policy, particularly restrictions on remote and written comments being presented during meetings.

Barg said a recently adopted policy allows speakers to provide their names and addresses to the clerk before the meeting without announcing that information publicly at the podium. Further discussion will address whether other provisions are too restrictive and how presentation materials should be submitted in advance so they are available to the public.

Other agenda items include a report from Visit Marshfield on the Hub City Summer Concert Series and Maple Fall Fest, information about the costs and benefits of a citywide staffing study, and a comparison of Marshfield's municipal tax rate with other communities. Stay Connected
Granton's Haunted Forest brings scares for a cause

By David Murchland - Marshfield Now!

GRANTON — Visitors can face their fears while helping local families this October as Granton School hosts its annual Haunted Forest, with all proceeds supporting the Clark County

Christmas Angel Project.

The event will run from 7 to 10 p.m. Friday and Saturday, Oct. 16–17, at Granton School, 217 N. Main St. Admission is $10 per person.

This year's theme centers on phobias, incorporating creepy crawlies, tight spaces, darkness, dolls and clowns into the school forest. The wooded area, normally available to students and the public throughout the year, becomes the setting for a seasonal fundraiser that combines Halloween entertainment with holiday giving.

During an interview with Marshfield Broadcasting, event organizer Katie described the fundraiser's connection to the Christmas Angel Project and the students' excitement about welcoming visitors.

The Haunted Forest began in 2019. After taking a year off in 2020 because of the COVID-19 pandemic, organizers brought it back in 2021 and have continued offering a different theme each year.

Money raised supports the Clark County Christmas Angel Project, which provides gifts and food to area families needing additional help during the Christmas season. The project holds special meaning for participating FFA members and others in the Granton community.

Visitors who wish to contribute beyond the admission price can leave an additional donation in a pumpkin bucket at the ticket table.

As the holiday season approaches, community members will also have opportunities to support the Christmas Angel Project through giving trees at participating businesses, including banks and stores in the Neillsville and Granton areas. Those trees provide lists of children's needs, allowing donors to purchase items such as winter coats, clothing and toys. The project also accepts general donations.

Haunted Forest attendees should park in the school's elementary parking lot and follow the solar-lighted trail to the playground, where the ticket table and concession stand will be located.

For organizers and students, the event offers a chance to turn October scares into Christmas support for families throughout the area.

Alpine Holiday to bring food, music and family fun to Columbus Catholic Schools Nov. 13-14

By David Murchland - Marshfield Now!

MARSHFIELD — A longtime Marshfield tradition will return Nov. 13-14 as Columbus Catholic Schools hosts Alpine Holiday, bringing together live entertainment, holiday shopping, family activities and fundraising opportunities.

Event co-chairs Edna and Bryan DeVries joined host Peggy Sue Behselich on Marshfield Broadcasting's Hub City Times Presents to preview the celebration and invite community members to participate.

The two-day event supports Columbus Catholic Schools while providing a gathering place for families, friends and neighbors.

"Truly, the other goal absolutely is to bring the community together," the co-chairs said during the interview.

Festivities begin at 4 p.m. Friday, Nov. 13, with a fish fry, polka music, children's games and a craft boutique. Boogie and the Yo-Yoz will headline Friday evening's entertainment, with no cover charge thanks to sponsor support.

Organizers encouraged fish fry guests to arrive early because the popular meal has sold out in previous years. Meal prices were still being finalized at the time of the interview.

The craft boutique will again occupy the school's field house, providing more room for vendors and shoppers.

Approximately 70 vendors were lined up when the program was recorded, with space available for additional participants. Columbus spirit wear will also be available in the field house.

Saturday's activities begin at 8 a.m., with an ugly sweater 5K run among the morning attractions. Participants are encouraged to embrace the holiday theme with festive clothing.

A pancake breakfast will be served from 8 to 11 a.m., followed by a visit from Santa and Mrs. Claus from 10 a.m. to noon.

Food will be available throughout the day at the Snowflake Cafe, with offerings expected to include hamburgers, hot dogs, cheese curds, french fries and chicken strips. A pulled pork dinner featuring pork prepared by local cook Cody Casperson is scheduled from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m.

A dessert cart operated by the Mission Club will offer donated baked goods, with proceeds supporting the club's projects. Organizers welcome contributions from community bakers.

Saturday's entertainment will highlight local talent, including the Madrigal Singers, the Dance Academy, Columbus High School's jazz band and the school's lip-sync contest. Additional musical performances are planned, with performance times still being finalized.

Following its debut last year, trivia will return Saturday from 6 to 8 p.m. The competition is moving from the cafeteria into the varsity gym to accommodate more teams. Organizers hope to attract approximately 20 teams, with registration available through the Columbus Catholic Schools website.

The silent auction will feature classroom projects and items donated by local businesses and supporters. All bidding is moving online this year, allowing participants to follow the auction throughout the weekend.

Bidding is expected to open earlier in the event week and close at 9 p.m.

Saturday, one hour after the main festivities conclude. Volunteers will be available near the auction displays to help guests access the online system.

Another fundraising highlight is the raffle calendar, which costs $20 and offers a chance to win a $10,000 grand prize. The grand prize drawing is scheduled for 8 p.m. Saturday, with additional prizes listed on the calendar.

Alpine Holiday traces its beginnings to a 1978 ski swap organized to raise money for a teaching position. Over the years, it expanded into a community celebration supported by hundreds of volunteers.

The DeVrieses said their family's connection to Columbus helped inspire them to serve as co-chairs. Their children attended the schools, and Bryan taught there for 17 years and has coached there for more than 30 years.

Organizers are seeking volunteers, additional craft vendors, auction donations and baked goods. Information and registration forms are available in the Alpine Holiday section of the Columbus Catholic Schools website. Those interested in helping may also email alpine@columbusdons.org.

Final schedules, meal prices and additional announcements will be shared through the school's website and

Alanna Feddick outlines approach to municipal judge role on “Get to Know”

MARSHFIELD — Municipal judge candidate Alanna Feddick discussed her legal experience, public service and approach to fairness in the courtroom during a recent appearance on Marshfield Broadcasting’s Get to Know program.

In the interview with host David Murchland, Feddick said she would emphasize impartial decisions, clear communication and respectful treatment of people appearing before the Marshfield Area Joint Municipal Court, which serves Marshfield, Spencer and Stratford.

Feddick said she has practiced law for 25 years and has served on the Marshfield City Council, along with city committees and commissions. She described her involvement in Leadership Marshfield as an experience that helped inspire her interest in municipal service.

Her legal background includes representing defendants in municipal court and clients on both sides of civil cases. Feddick said she has never served as a prosecutor and believes her experience representing people navigating the court system gives her a different perspective on the judge’s role.

A central theme of the conversation was helping people understand court proceedings. Feddick said those appearing in court may be nervous or unfamiliar with the process, particularly young people facing their first citation.

She said a judge should explain procedures in plain language while maintaining impartiality and avoiding giving legal advice.

“It’s really important that we don’t use a bunch of legalese to explain to people what they need to do,” Feddick said.

She also emphasized listening, respecting people’s time and allowing them an opportunity to explain their circumstances.

Discussing how she would make decisions, Feddick said judges must evaluate the evidence, assess credibility and apply the law. When the law permits discretion, she said, a judge should consider the seriousness of the violation and steps a person has taken to address the problem, such as completing traffic safety education.

She said those considerations should be applied consistently.

“The law says one thing and that’s what we have to follow,” Feddick said.

Asked about people who cannot afford a forfeiture or meet another court obligation, Feddick said she would listen to the barriers they face, consider their financial circumstances and explore flexibility allowed by law.

The interview also addressed juvenile cases. Feddick praised the former municipal judge’s approach to listening to young people and social workers, recognizing accountability and giving juveniles opportunities to correct their behavior. She said she would seek to follow that example.

On conflicts of interest, Feddick said she would recuse herself when a conflict exists and seek ethics guidance when questions arise. She stressed the importance of avoiding personal connections that could compromise impartial decision-making.

Feddick said voters should look for integrity, sound judgment, knowledge of the law, patience, compassion and a commitment to public service in a municipal judge. She also emphasized explaining decisions so people understand how the court reached a result, even when they disagree with it.

The interview is part of Marshfield Broadcasting's effort to give residents an opportunity to hear directly from candidates seeking public office. All qualified candidates for the position were offered an equal opportunity to participate.

Viewers can watch Get to Know at marshfieldbroadcasting.com, on Marshfield Now! Channel 990 and through Marshfield Broadcasting's streaming platforms.

Krista James Discusses Municipal Judge Candidacy on "Get to Know"

MARSHFIELD — Krista James, who has served as interim municipal judge since February, discussed her legal background, approach to handling cases and priorities for the Marshfield Area Joint Municipal Court during a recent appearance on Marshfield Broadcasting's Get to Know program.

The court serves Marshfield, Spencer and Stratford. In her interview with host David Murchland, James said she is seeking election to the position this November with an emphasis on fairness, impartiality and respect for everyone who enters the courtroom.

"I hope to use my experience and my educational background to ensure that all who come to court are treated with dignity and respect while receiving a thoughtful and fair decision," James said.

A Marshfield resident who lives with her husband and their four sons, James currently works as in-house counsel for a local business. Her previous experience includes serving in the Dane County District Attorney's Office from 2014 to 2020, advancing from special prosecutor to assistant district attorney and then deputy district attorney. In that role, she oversaw the juvenile unit.

James later worked in the Portage County District Attorney's Office for approximately a year and a half. She also served a three-year term on the Marshfield Ethics Committee. She earned her law degree from the University of Wisconsin–Madison and holds an undergraduate degree in social work, along with certificates in criminal justice and educational policy studies.

During the interview, James explained that the municipal court handles civil ordinance violations, including traffic violations, truancy, curfew violations and certain first-offense alcohol-related driving cases. It does not handle criminal cases, divorces or custody matters.

Helping residents understand the process is an important part of her approach, James said. Many people appearing before the court do not have an attorney and may be entering a courtroom for the first time.

She said she begins initial appearances with a five- to 10-minute overview of what to expect that day and as a case proceeds. While she cannot provide legal advice, she can explain procedures and answer questions.

James also discussed balancing consistent application of the law with consideration of individual circumstances. She said decisions must be based on the facts and evidence, while both the prosecutor and defendant have an opportunity to present information relevant to the penalty.

When someone faces difficulty paying a court-ordered amount, James said she works to establish a manageable payment arrangement. She distinguished an inability to pay from an unwillingness to pay and noted that community service may be appropriate in some juvenile cases.

For younger people appearing in court, James described providing written information followed by a verbal explanation of the allegations, plea options and potential penalties.

She also highlighted a scheduling change currently being developed for juvenile hearings. Historically, families arrived at the same time and waited for individual, closed hearings. James said the court is transitioning toward scheduling groups at different times to reduce waits that can sometimes exceed an hour.

Asked about conflicts of interest, James said judges must recognize situations requiring them to step aside and carefully assess whether they can remain impartial.

James said voters should look for honesty, fairness, impartiality and a commitment to justice when choosing a municipal judge.

The full interview is available at marshfieldbroadcasting.com, on Marshfield Now! Channel 990, and through Marshfield Broadcasting's streaming platforms.
