Marshfield Marks 25th Anniversary of September 11 Attacks

By David Murchland - Marshfield Now!

MARSHFIELD, Wis. — Community members, veterans, first responders and local officials gathered at Marshfield Fire and Rescue Thursday morning to commemorate the 25th anniversary of the September 11, 2001 terrorist attacks and honor the nearly 3,000 people who lost their lives.

The September 11 remembrance ceremony was hosted by the Marshfield Veterans Council and brought together representatives from local fire, law enforcement, military and veterans organizations.

“We have not forgotten,” Marshfield Veterans Council President Sue Sternberg told those gathered. “We are here as a community in remembrance” of the men, women and children who lost their lives in the attacks.

The ceremony opened with the presentation of colors by the Wood County Sheriff’s Department, the singing of the National Anthem and an opening prayer and Pledge of Allegiance.

Marshfield Mayor Nick Poeschel welcomed those attending, reflecting on not only the tragedy of September 11, but also the unity that followed.

“We remember the tragedy of the lives that were lost and we remember the bravery of the first responders who answered the call that day,” Poeschel said. He encouraged the community to remember how Americans came together following the attacks and to work toward a more just and peaceful nation and world.

Poeschel then read a city proclamation officially recognizing September 11, 2026, as Patriot Day and National Day of Service and Remembrance in the City of Marshfield.

The proclamation recognized the nearly 3,000 people killed in the attacks in New York City, at the Pentagon and aboard Flight 93 in Pennsylvania, while honoring firefighters, law enforcement officers, emergency medical personnel, members of the armed forces, public servants, volunteers and citizens who responded that day and in the years that followed.

The proclamation also recognized Marshfield’s own first responders, dispatchers, military members and veterans and called on residents to carry forward the values of “service, courage, compassion and community.”

Marshfield Fire and Rescue Deputy Chief Brian Barnes spoke about the lasting impact September 11 has had on the fire service.

“For the fire service, 9-11 is more than just a date to us. It is our heritage,” Barnes said.

Barnes remembered the 343 firefighters who died after answering the call that morning and said today’s firefighters have inherited the responsibility of carrying on their legacy through training, service and taking care of one another.

“The greatest way to honor all of them” is not through remembrance only on September 11, Barnes said, but by serving communities every day with the same duty, professionalism and commitment demonstrated by those who responded to the attacks.

of integrity, courage and service.

During his remarks, Geurink also recognized Commissioner Pinker and his wife, Cindy, for donating a memorial honoring the law enforcement officers lost on September 11. The memorial is expected to be displayed in Marshfield’s new police facility.

The ceremony also included reflections

She thanked those who attended, saying their presence sent a message that Marshfield will continue to remember the innocent victims who died on September 11, 2001.

Marshfield VFW Invites Students to Enter Voice of Democracy, Patriot’s Pen Competitions

By David Murchland - Marshfield Now!

MARSHFIELD, Wis. — Marshfield-area middle and high school students are invited to share their perspectives on America while competing for scholarships and awards through the Veterans of Foreign Wars’ 2026-27 youth competitions.

Marshfield Police Chief Jody Geurink also reflected on how September 11 reshaped public safety agencies across the country, including those far from the sites of the attacks.

“Twenty-five years ago, our nation was changed in ways that still echo through every community, including our own here in Marshfield,” Geurink said.

He said September 11 changed how law enforcement agencies approach preparedness, communication and service and reinforced the commitment officers make to step forward during moments of crisis.

Geurink also spoke about the unity Americans demonstrated following the attacks.

“While we cannot change what happened, we can choose how we honor it,” he said, calling on those in public service to continue living by the values on the military response that followed September 11 and the lasting effects of the wars that followed. Attendees were asked to remember not only those killed during the attacks, but also responders, recovery workers, military personnel and families who have continued to live with the effects of September 11.

A joint honor guard made up of members of the fire department, military and Marshfield Police Department participated in the ceremony, which included a ceremonial salute.

The observance concluded with the singing of “God Bless America,” a closing prayer and a final reminder of why the community continues to gather each September 11.

“9-11 did not end when the smoke cleared,” Sternberg said, noting that survivors, responders, workers, families and service members continue to experience its effects.

The VFW’s Voice of Democracy and Patriot’s Pen competitions share this year’s theme: “What a Veteran Taught Me About America.”

The Voice of Democracy competition is open to students in grades 9 through 12. Students must write and record an original three- to five-minute audio essay based on the annual theme. The national first-place winner will receive a $35,000 scholarship.

Voice of Democracy has been a VFW scholarship program since 1947. Nearly 26,000 high school students participate annually, competing for more than $2 million in scholarships and incentives.

Awards can be presented at the Post, District, state and national levels.

The Patriot's Pen competition is open to students in grades 6 through 8. Participants must write an original essay between 300 and 400 words on the same theme. The national first-place winner will receive a $5,000 award.

More than 60,000 students participated in Patriot's Pen last year. Students begin at the local VFW Post level, with winners advancing through District and state competition before reaching the national level.

Entries for both competitions must be submitted to a participating VFW Post by midnight on October 31, 2026.

Prevail Bank Marshfield Collects More Than 20,000 Pounds of Electronic Waste

Story sent in by Prevail Bank

MARSHFIELD, Wis. — September 10, 2026 — More than 20,000 pounds of unwanted electronics were collected in Marshfield as part of Prevail Bank's community E-cycling initiative this summer.

Prevail Bank announced Thursday that its free E-cycling events collected a combined 39,518 pounds — or approximately 19.7 tons — of electronic waste across its Wisconsin service area between June and early September.

The Marshfield location accounted for more than half of that total, collecting 20,105 pounds of electronic waste.

“At Prevail Bank, giving back to our communities means supporting initiatives that improve the quality of life for current and future generations,” said Nathan Quinnell, Prevail Bank CEO and president. “The overwhelming participation in these E-cycling events highlights our communities’ commitment to environmental stewardship and responsible recycling.”

The free events gave residents an opportunity to dispose of unwanted household electronics, including televisions, computers, laptops, printers, phones and other electronic devices.

Prevail Bank partnered with First Choice, a certified electronics recycling provider, to process the collected material. According to the bank, the company ensures the electronics are recycled rather than sent to landfills and provides secure destruction of personal data stored on electronic devices.

Electronic waste has become an increasing concern as consumers replace computers, televisions, phones and other technology. Improperly discarded electronics can introduce potentially hazardous materials into landfills.

Prevail Bank said the E-cycling program was designed to give residents a convenient and free way to dispose of old electronics responsibly while reducing the amount of electronic waste entering landfills.

Across all of the bank's collection events, the nearly 20 tons of electronics gathered was roughly equivalent to the weight of nine midsize pickup trucks.

The bank said the turnout demonstrates the impact businesses and residents can have when working together on community sustainability efforts.

Wildwood Zoo Provides Update on White-Tailed Deer Herd

MARSHFIELD, Wis. — Sept. 9, 2026 — Wildwood Zoo is providing an update on its white-tailed deer herd following the loss of several animals this summer, including Grant, the zoo's longtime buck.

Zoo officials said they recognize how much the community cares about the pasture animals and that the recent losses have been difficult for both staff and visitors. Grant died earlier this year, followed by two does.

As the zoo's deer herd ages, some losses are a natural part of caring for older animals. However, Wildwood Zoo said each deer that has died has been tested for both Chronic Wasting Disease (CWD) and tuberculosis (TB).

According to the zoo, all test results were either negative or inconclusive, with the underlying causes of death consistent with old age.

CWD is an always-fatal neurological disease that affects cervids, including white-tailed deer. Infected animals can carry the disease for an extended period without displaying symptoms. Because of that, Wildwood Zoo tests every cervid that dies as part of its ongoing efforts to protect the health of the herd.

The zoo has also received questions from community members about whether additional deer will be brought to Wildwood Zoo and whether fawns could eventually become part of the herd.

At this time, there is no timeline for adding more deer. Zoo officials said any future additions will be carefully considered, with the health and welfare of the existing herd remaining the priority.

Wildwood Zoo is also reminding residents to use caution if they encounter a wild deer that appears sick. Signs of concern may include an unnatural head tilt, little fear of humans or other unusual or unhealthy behavior.

Anyone who encounters a potentially sick wild deer should contact the Wisconsin Department of Natural Resources at 608-267-0866 and should not approach the animal.

Wildwood Zoo thanked the community for its continued support of the zoo, its animals and staff, and for the care and concern residents continue to show for the deer herd.

Marshfield Council Hears Road Funding Concerns, Fire Training Plans and Calls for Camping Ordinance

By David Murchland - Marshfield Now!

MARSHFIELD, Wis. — Road funding, a proposed vehicle registration fee, fire department training needs and concerns about camping on public streets were among the major issues before the Marshfield Common Council during its Sept. 8 meetings.

Council President Scott Koran discussed the meeting during Marshfield Broadcasting's Post Council Update, describing a busy evening that began with a joint meeting between the in the future. No final direction was selected, and additional meetings and discussions are expected.

The council also approved a bid for a portable live-fire training structure costing approximately $150,000. The structure is expected to provide firefighters with a short-term training option while the city considers its longer-term needs. Koran said the fire department is also looking for state, federal and matching grants that could Common Council and Police and Fire Commission before the regular council meeting.

Fire Training Facility Discussed

The joint meeting focused on the future of fire department training facilities. According to Koran, the city's existing live-fire training building dates to approximately 1962 and is no longer suitable for fire training.

Officials were presented with the possibility of developing a training facility on the city's north side. Koran said the estimated cost discussed was approximately $1.2 million, although the proposal remains in the early stages.

Questions include whether to invest at the existing south-side property or pursue a north-side location that could provide additional opportunities reduce the local cost of future training improvements.

Vehicle Registration Fee Fails to Advance

The proposed municipal vehicle registration fee — commonly called a “wheel tax” — drew significant public attention.

Koran estimated that 10 to 12 people spoke during public comment, with residents expressing concerns about taxes, city spending and the proposed fee. He said the comments reflected both frustration with the condition of city streets and strong opposition to another fee.

When the vehicle registration fee came before the council later in the meeting, no council member made a motion to advance the proposal.

That leaves the proposed fee without council action for now as officials prepare to begin reviewing the city's upcoming budget.	Downtown Facade Program Seeks Funding	James Leven presented two possible approaches for completing the update, with additional discussion and cost information expected before a final decision.
The larger problem of paying for street maintenance remains unresolved.	Carter Howe of Main Street Marshfield also spoke during public comment regarding continued funding for the downtown facade improvement program.	With the vehicle registration fee failing to advance, decisions surrounding roads, city services and the 2027 budget are likely to remain central issues for the Common Council as budget deliberations begin.
Koran said approximately 78 to 79 percent of Marshfield streets are rated six or lower on a 10-point pavement condition scale and therefore require some level of maintenance or reconstruction. He also questioned the city's practice of using long-term borrowing for maintenance work with a much shorter useful life.	The program has historically provided matching assistance for improvements to downtown properties, with participating property owners contributing a dollar for each matching dollar received.	Granton's Haunted Forest Returns with 'Forest of Phobias' Theme
Moving approximately $400,000 in road maintenance expenses back into the general fund, however, could require reductions elsewhere in the city budget. Koran said those decisions will become clearer once the council receives the proposed budget.	Supporters say the program encourages investment in downtown buildings, improves property values and strengthens the appearance of the downtown district. Koran said the program has contributed to significant downtown improvements over roughly the past two decades. Funding is expected to be considered as part of upcoming budget discussions.	GRANTON, Wis. — Granton's Haunted Forest will return this October, inviting visitors to confront some of their deepest fears while raising money to help local children during the holiday season.
"No one made a motion," Koran said of the registration fee proposal. He added that council members have not yet seen the upcoming budget and therefore do not know the full extent of the city's financial needs.	Budget and CIP Discussions Approaching	This year's theme, "Forest of Phobias," will transform the woods around Granton School into a trail inspired by the fears and anxieties that keep people awake at night. Organizers say visitors can expect towering terrors, creepy crawlers, dark spaces and other surprises designed to turn familiar phobias into frightening encounters.
Residents Seek Camping Ordinance	The council is preparing to move into one of its busiest periods of the year as work begins on the Capital Improvement Program and 2027 budget.	New this year, members of the Loyal FFA Chapter will join volunteers helping bring the Haunted Forest to life.
Several residents also called on the city to address people camping or living for extended periods on streets and other public property.	Koran said the council expects its first look at the CIP during an early meeting Sept. 22, with budget information potentially beginning to come before members around the same time.	The Haunted Forest is scheduled for October 9, 10, 16 and 17 from 7 to 10 p.m. at Granton School, 217 N. Main Street in Granton.
Koran said residents raised concerns about garbage, sanitation and individuals remaining near residential properties for extended periods. Similar situations have also occurred at other public locations around the city.	Other upcoming issues include the city's strategic plan, the eventual disposition of the current police station after the department moves into its new facility, and an update to Marshfield's comprehensive plan.	Admission is $10 per person. The attraction is recommended for ages 12 and older, although organizers say all are welcome. Parking will be available in the elementary school parking lot, with signs directing visitors to the Haunted Forest entrance.
The council is expected to consider a proposed ordinance addressing camping at an upcoming meeting. Koran said he expects the issue could return as soon as Sept. 22 and that an ordinance would require two readings.	The current comprehensive plan dates to 2017 and must be updated to remain compliant with the state's 10-year planning requirement. City Planner
